Royalton's Resilience Resources

Community resilience is the ability of a community to prepare for, withstand and respond to adverse situations.

Having experienced Tropical Storm Irene, we are well aware of the need to have systems and supplies in place, ready for any emergency. We are working to improve our town's resilience.

Ultimately, our community's resilience depends on each individual taking responsibility for preparing him or herself and their family for potential emergencies. After individual and family resilience plans are established, each household should develop lines of communication with neighbors so that they can be contacted when emergencies happen.
